I understand this is all about betrayal how my own lies don't choke me and I drink the cool milk, the cool milk, rising slowly from the table in one long motion as the bell sounds, as the blood, in my heart, there you are, but I do it anyway, I do it anyway, I drink the cool milk looking over the edge of the glass into your eyes. I leave the rest of the night meal on the table just as you will begin by drinking the grass taste of trust, and then my calm hand, the hand I gave you so many years and sleepless and which you never expected to fill the glass as my hand and
